Description

Indian Notes and Monographs: Beothuk and Micmac

By Frank G. Speck (1922)

Indian Notes and Monographs: Beothuk and Micmac by anthropologist Frank G. Speck, published in 1922, is a significant ethnographic work documenting two Indigenous groups of Newfoundland: the Beothuk and the Mi'kmaq. In this volume, Speck provides a thorough exploration of the cultures, customs, languages, and histories of these groups, with a particular focus on the Beothuk, who were largely extinct by the time of his writing, and the enduring traditions of the Mi'kmaq people.

Speck's work combines firsthand observations, historical accounts, and oral traditions to create a rare and valuable record of these Indigenous communities. Illustrated with photographs and drawings, the book offers insights into the tools, art, and ways of life of the Beothuk and Mi'kmaq. This monograph is a treasured resource for anthropologists, historians, and anyone interested in the Indigenous history of Newfoundland and Labrador, preserving knowledge of cultures that have shaped the region's identity.
