Description

History of Newfoundland

By Rev. M. Harvey (1890)

History of Newfoundland by Rev. M. Harvey, published in 1890, is a detailed historical account of Newfoundland's development from its early discovery to the late 19th century. Written by a clergyman with a keen interest in the island's religious, social, and economic evolution, the book explores Newfoundland's early settlement by the French and English, the establishment of its fisheries, and the gradual formation of its unique cultural identity.

Rev. Harvey provides a thorough narrative of Newfoundland's history, touching upon the role of the Church in the community, the impact of colonialism, the challenges faced by early settlers, and the growth of trade and industry. The work is also valuable for its examination of the island's relationship with Indigenous peoples, its governance, and the development of Newfoundland's political and social institutions in the context of the British Empire.

History of Newfoundland is an essential resource for anyone studying the island's colonial history and its path toward greater autonomy. With its combination of religious, economic, and social perspectives, it remains an important text for understanding the foundations of Newfoundland's society and its unique place in Canadian history.
