Description

Who's Who in and From Newfoundland (1937)

Who's Who in and From Newfoundland (1937) is an important biographical compendium that captures the lives and contributions of Newfoundland's most distinguished individuals at a pivotal moment in the province's history. This edition, published during the interwar period, profiles notable figures from various sectors, including government, business, education, the arts, and social service, providing a detailed look at the people who were instrumental in shaping Newfoundland's identity as a dominion of the British Empire, just before it became part of Canada in 1949.

The book includes in-depth biographical sketches, offering personal details, career highlights, and accomplishments, painting a portrait of the province's political, cultural, and economic landscape. For researchers, historians, and genealogists, Who's Who in and From Newfoundland (1937) serves as a key reference work, reflecting the province's socio-political fabric during the late 1930s. As a snapshot of Newfoundland at a significant time of change, this book remains an essential resource for anyone interested in the figures who helped lead Newfoundland through its unique path to Confederation.
